Twenty misfit dogs, most destined to be destroyed at various Quebec shelters, were given a new lease on life thanks to the generosity of a Vaughan businessman.

Lou Tucci, co-owner of Royal Envelope Ltd., heard about the dogs' plight from Barbara Steinhoff, executive director of the Toronto Humane Society.

Tucci committed to paying for their transfer to Toronto, which he believes will be about $800.

When the dogs are ready to be adopted, their photos will be posted on the humane society's website. TORSTAR NEW SERVICE

Welfare bump gets Wynne's attention

Social-assistance reform. Incoming premier gives priority to commission report

Anti-poverty activists were thrilled last week when incoming premier Kathleen Wynne highlighted welfare reform as one of her top priorities.

So was Frances Lankin, who was worried her sweeping blueprint for change as co-chair of the province's social assistance reform commission would be lost in a political black hole after Dalton McGuinty prorogued the legislature and resigned as Liberal leader last fall.

But Lankin, a former United Way president and NDP cabinet minister, was one of the first people Wynne called after winning the leadership. Lankin is also among a handful of former politicians, community and business leaders on the incoming premier's non-partisan transition advisory committee.

"To have the report and its recommendations signalled as a serious part of the premier-designate's priorities is very gratifying," Lankin said of the report she and commission co-chair Munir Sheihk submitted in October.

Among the report's 108 recommendations is an immediate $100-a-month rate increase for single people on Ontario Works, who receive the lowest monthly rate of $606. It also calls for a monthly earnings exemption of $200 instead of the current 50-cent clawback on every dollar earned. And it recommends asset limits be raised to $6,000 for a single person and $7,500 for a couple.

The cost of the reforms, which include merging Ontario Works with the Ontario Disability Support Program and getting municipalities to administer the new program, was pegged at about $340 million annually.

Earnings regulations

- Incoming premier Kathleen Wynne could move on welfare reform as early as Monday when she meets with cabinet, social policy expert John Stapleton says.
- With the stroke of a pen, cabinet could direct the government to change the earnings regulations embedded in Ontario's welfare legislation and allow those on social assistance with jobs to keep more of what they make, said Stapleton, a former deputy minister of social services.

Evolution of Gay Village means shift for small businesses

Ted Genova is seen outside his shop, Flatirons, yet another store to close in the Church-Wellesley neighbourhood. Genova blames the closure on the area's declining nature as the heart of the gay community, and the influx of big-box stores like Loblaws. RICHARD LAUTENS/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

LGBT. Area is in transition, faced with spread of condos and the accompanying population boom

Standing amid cheeky cards, Wizard of Oz knickknacks and T-shirts that proclaim "Rob Ford Still Sucks," Ted Genova recalls the energy that drew him to open up shop in the Gay Village 20 years ago.

"I was like a dog with a bone. You could sniff it; there was something happening here," says the 59-year-old owner of the Flatiron's gift shop on Church Street.

But for some time "the bloom (has been) off the rose in the village. I think we've let it spin down."

The store will close its doors for good in March, Genova says, a casualty of high rent, changing demographics and the influx of soulless franchises and big-box stores.

"Where are people going to get their feather boas?" sighs Flatiron's salesperson Rebecca Norlock, who says the entirely gay-focused shop is a rarity even in the village. It's following, however, in the tracks of other small businesses that have closed or relocated over the past few years, such as Zelda's Restaurant and Reither's German Deli.

"The LGBT community is more spread out," says Genova.

While the village is not dying, he says, "it is morphing into something else."

Idle No More, anti-nuke protesters join forces

Idle No More protesters and anti-nuclear activists blocked the CP rail line near the General Electric-Hitachi nuclear-processing facility in Toronto on Sunday afternoon.

The protesters blocked a train but left peacefully, according to police at the scene. The rail-line protest came after a demonstration at the plant and a march through the surrounding neighbourhood earlier in the day.

The plant has been operating in the area for almost 50 years, but it went largely unnoticed by the community until anti-nuclear activist Zach (NoCameco) Ruiter began a campaign to get it shut down. He said anti-nuclear activism is now an issue that belongs with the Idle No More movement.

"Uranium is stolen from indigenous lands and it leaks radiation all along the fuel chain," he said while leading the march on Sunday.

John Jacobs is from Serpent River First Nation, where the watershed was damaged over decades by uranium mining around Elliot Lake.

"I'm here because uranium, it really affected my reserve back home," he said. "It did a lot of damage to our river. We can't use the river no more, we can't fish in it. We can't drink the water."

Jacobs said he thinks having a facility that processes uranium in a city is a "terrible idea."

"I'd like to see them get rid of uranium and nuclear power altogether," he said. "But if they have to do it, do it where there's no people. Somewhere — I don't know — but it's crazy having it in the middle of a neighbourhood. Who knows what's going to happen down the road. Nobody knows."

No one from GE Canada could be reached Sunday, but spokeswoman Kim Warburton has told the Torstar News Service the plant handles only natural uranium, which is "not dangerous" like its enriched counterpart.

Toronto through your eyes

The Disposable Camera Project. Initiative aims to capture city from point of view of Torontonians

One shot. That's all Torontonians are being given to tell their story of the city.

Disposable cameras are being hidden around Toronto, along with a message inviting people to stop, look around, and capture what they see and feel with one photograph.

"We wanted to showcase the city through the lens of the people living in it," says Michaelangelo Yambao, one of the people behind The Disposable Camera Project.

Yambao and his team of volunteers have placed cameras in spots they feel capture the identity of Toronto. Clues to the locations are posted on the project's website.

The initiative has been well received on social media sites such as Reddit, Instagram and Twitter.

"People dig it," Yambao says. "They dig the hints, they're looking for the cameras."

Organizers say they chose disposable cameras over digital snapshots because of the immediacy of film.

"When you think of a city, it's not pre-planned, it's not pre-ordained. It's not filtered," Yambao says.

The 10 best shots will be displayed at the Lomography gallery on Queen Street West as part of the Toronto Urban Photography Festival, which takes place March 9 to 23.

The festival is the brainchild of Cliff Davidson, a Western University graduate student who worked on a similar event while studying in London, England.

Mystery. Experts to reveal if skeleton found under parking lot is Richard III

A historical mystery could soon be resolved, with the help of a Canadian family.

Scientists on Monday will announce the results of tests meant to determine whether a skeleton found under a parking lot in central England belongs to 15th-century King Richard III, the last English monarch to die in combat.

Researchers at the University of Leicester have analyzed the bones, which were discovered during an archeological dig in September.

The skeleton showed signs of Richard's famed spinal curvature and of fatal battle wounds.

Scientists compared its DNA with samples taken from a Canadian family that is a direct descendant of Anne of York, Richard's eldest sister.

Jeff Ibsen says he was warned long ago that his family might be called upon if the king's burying place was ever discovered.

Archaeologists had long sought the monarch's grave, which had been the subject of speculation for centuries.

Crime. Two homicides probed in Toronto and Richmond Hill

Two women are dead after homicides in North York and Richmond Hill this weekend.

Mohamed Adam Bharwani, 18, has been charged with first-degree murder after a 23-year-old woman was found "suffering from apparent trauma to her body" at a North York home Saturday. She was pronounced dead in hospital.

The investigation so far has shown that the accused and victim had "no relationship," said homicide Det. Graham Gibson, adding police know what the motive is but aren't releasing those details.

Meanwhile, homicide detectives continue to investigate the murder of a woman found dead in a Richmond Hill condo early Saturday.

A man was arrested at the condo and charged with murder, said York Region Insp. Angelo De Lorenzi.

Minister hints Israel was behind airstrike on Syria

Middle East. Israelis fear Syrian weapons could wind up in hands of Lebanese militants

Israel's defence minister strongly signalled Sunday that his country was behind an airstrike in Syria last week, telling a high-profile security conference that Israeli threats to take pre-emptive action against its enemies are not empty. "We mean it," Ehud Barak declared.

Israel has not officially confirmed its planes attacked a site near Damascus, targeting ground-to-air missiles apparently heading for Lebanon, but its intentions have been beyond dispute. During the 22 months of civil war in Syria, Israeli leaders have repeatedly expressed concern that high-end weapons could fall into the hands of enemy Hezbollah, the powerful Lebanese militants.

Ehud Barak THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

For years, Israel has been charging that Syrian President Bashar Assad and Iran have been arming Hezbollah, which fought a month-long war against Israel in 2006.

U.S. officials say the target was a convoy of sophisticated Russian SA-17 anti-aircraft missiles. Deployed in Lebanon, they could have limited Israel's ability to gather intelligence on its enemies from the air.

Over the weekend, Syrian TV broadcast video of the Wednesday attack site for the first time, showing destroyed vehicles and a damaged building identified as a scientific research centre. The U.S. officials said the airstrike hit both the building and the convoy.

In his comments Sunday in Munich, Barak came close to confirming that his country was behind the airstrike.

"I cannot add anything to what you have read in the newspapers about what happened in Syria several days ago," Barak said.

Then he went on to say, "I keep telling frankly that we said — and that's proof when we said something we mean it — we say that we don't think it should be allowed to bring advanced weapons systems into Lebanon."

RCMP kept a close eye on the Occupy Ottawa protest

Access-to-information request. Documents show Mounties nabbed pamphlets, monitored social media sites and counted participants

The Mounties compiled a dossier on the Occupy Ottawa movement, scouring social media and quizzing campus security after protesters held planning sessions at a university, newly released documents show.

Meeting notes show there were also plans to monitor the Confederation Park protest site using a camera mounted to the nearby offices of the National Capital Commission (NCC).

The camera is normally pointed at Ottawa's city hall, the notes say. However, the NCC says it does not operate the camera and it did not use the device to monitor protests.

The documents show NCC staff did keep close tabs on the makeshift encampment throughout the occupation, snapping dozens of photographs and reporting on the protesters' activities.

Details about the surveillance tactics are only now coming to light, some 14 months after police ousted the Occupy Ottawa protesters from Confederation Park in late November 2011. It took the NCC until last week to provide documents in response to an access-to-information request.

Notes from a meeting held before the Ottawa occupation started show there was talk the protesters might also target Parliament Hill, the prime minister's residence, the Privy Council Office and the U.S. Embassy.

An RCMP intelligence report shows the Mounties picked up Occupy pamphlets and literature after the protesters met at the University of Ottawa. They also questioned campus security about the number of people in the room. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Background checks. NRA executive sticks to his guns despite poll results

The National Rifle Association's executive vice-president continued to oppose background checks for all gun purchases despite polls indicating that most members of the influential gun-rights lobbying group don't share his position.

The NRA's Wayne LaPierre said on Fox News Sunday that background checks for all gun purchases would lead to a national registry of gun owners. Critics say such a registry could lead to taxes on guns or to confiscation.

Mark Kelly, a gun owner and husband of Gabrielle Giffords, the former Arizona congresswoman who survived a 2011 mass shooting, asked LaPierre to listen to his members. He said the current system prevented 1.7 million gun purchases since 1999. However, those potential buyers had other options because many gun sales don't require a background check.

LaPierre was pressed about his contention that gun checks would lead to a national registry, when no one from the Obama administration is calling for that.

"And Obamacare wasn't a tax until they needed it to be a tax," LaPierre said, referring to the president's health-care overhaul. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chicago at centre of U.S. debate

After a year in which Chicago's death toll surpassed 500, the bloodshed has continued in 2013 at a rate of more than one killing a day — the deadliest January in a decade.

This week's death of a 15-year-old drum majorette, who had just returned from performing at President Barack Obama's inauguration, has put Obama's hometown at the centre of the intensifying national debate over guns.

The slayings are no longer dismissed as an only-in-Chicago story about violent street gangs.

Both gun-rights and gun-control advocates are seizing on the city's woes — one side pushing for greater access to guns for self-defence, the other seeking greater restrictions on gun sales. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hunting guide came across bodies of ace sniper Chris Kyle and a friend on a shooting range Saturday

A 25-year-old Iraq war veteran charged with murdering former Navy SEAL and American Sniper author Chris Kyle and his friend allegedly turned his gun onto the pair while they were at a Texas shooting range, authorities said Sunday.

Eddie Ray Routh, of Lancaster, was arraigned early Sunday on two counts of capital murder in the deaths of Kyle, 38, and Chad Littlefield, 35, at the shooting range about 80 kilometres southwest of Fort Worth.

Capt. Jason Upshaw with the Erath County Sheriff's Office said Routh allegedly used a semi-automatic handgun, which authorities are said to have later found at his home.

The U.S. military confirmed Sunday that Routh was a corporal in the Marines from June 2006 to January 2010. He was deployed to Iraq in 2007 and Haiti in 2010.

After the shootings, Routh allegedly left the shooting range in Kyle's black pickup truck, Bryant said, first going to his sister's home in Midlothian, where he allegedly told her and her husband what he had done. The couple called local police. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Police begin investigation into landslide

Provincial police have begun some analysis on the site and in the pit.

Pulled from the rubble. Adherence to safety protocols will be examined in death of two workers

Quebec's provincial police and workplace safety board have launched an investigation into a deadly landslide at a quarry near Montreal.

Officers will try to determine the circumstances of the accident now that the recovery effort is over, said police spokesman Gregory Gomez on Sunday.

The bodies of two missing workers — a woman and a man — were pulled from the rubble on Saturday, four days after a landslide at the gravel quarry in L'Epiphanie.

Police will examine whether the company operating the quarry, Maskimo Construction Inc., followed the appropriate safety protocols, Gomez said in an interview.

"We've done some analysis on the site and in the pit," he said.

"We're going to try to determine what happened, the sequence of events and if there is criminal wrongdoing in this incident."

Maskimo Construction has come under scrutiny before. The company was fined in 2008 after failing to follow safety protocols when a worker was run over by a truck a year earlier.

The company held a press conference on Saturday extending its sympathies to the victims' families and promising to co-operate with investigators.

When survivor Benoit Robert spoke with reporters last week, he said he didn't blame his employer and described them as responsible.

Jacques Nadeau, spokesman for Quebec's workplace safety board, said the investigation would include interviewing workers at the site and geological experts.

"We'll have to look at the history behind the company, but every accident is unique," he said, adding that the investigation would take about six months. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Man Tasered outside royal palace

Police used a stun gun to arrest a man armed with knives outside Buckingham Palace on Sunday, as throngs of tourists gathered to watch the Changing of the Guard ceremony there.

Scotland Yard said the man was spotted carrying two knives outside the central gate of the London tourist landmark. He did not threaten other people at the scene but acted aggressively when challenged by police.

A video posted to YouTube showed the man putting a kitchen knife to his neck and shouting. He took several swipes at a policeman, who fired the stun gun.

Witnesses said the man had broken through a security cordon and was attempting to walk toward the palace guards when he was stopped by police. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Victoria, B.C.

Super Bowl trip goes to pot

A decades-old pot possession charge cost a Victoria man the trip of a lifetime.

Myles Wilkinson beat nearly four million contestants to win a trip to the Super Bowl in New Orleans, but his victory went up in smoke when Toronto airport border guards blocked him from crossing this week due to a 32-year-old charge for less than two grams of cannabis.

At the time, a teenaged Wilkinson paid a $50 fine.

This is an "all too common" story, said Dana Larsen, director of the Sensible B.C. campaign to hold a referendum on decriminalizing cannabis.

"Any kind of possession conviction means a lifetime ban on crossing the U.S. border," Larsen said, adding that someone charged but not convicted can still be refused entry to the States.

Wilkinson plans to join the Sensible B.C. campaign. EMILY JACKSON/METRO IN VANCOUVER

Twitter hacking may affect 250K accounts

Cyberspying. Social-media giant has not said whether China is behind security breach

Twitter is among the latest U.S. companies to report that it is part of a growing list of victims of Internet security attacks, saying that hackers may have gained access to information on 250,000 of its more than 200 million active users. And now The Washington Post is joining the chorus, revealing the discovery of a sophisticated cyber attack in 2011.

Twitter said in a blog post on Friday it detected attempts to gain access to its user data earlier in the week. It shut down one attack moments after it was detected.

But Twitter discovered that the attackers may have stolen user names, email addresses and encrypted passwords belonging to 250,000 users they describe as "a very small percentage of our users." The company reset the pilfered passwords and sent emails advising the affected users.

Quoted

"(The attack) was not the work of amateurs, and we do not believe it was an isolated incident."

Bob Lord, Twitter's director of information security, writing in a blog post.

The Twitter attack comes on the heels of recent hacks into the computer systems of U.S. companies, including The New York Times and The Wall Street Journal. Both newspapers reported last week that their computer systems had been infiltrated by China-based hackers, likely to monitor media coverage the Chinese government deems important.

On Friday, The Washington Post disclosed that it was also the target of a sophisticated cyber attack, which was discovered in 2011 and was first reported by an independent cyber security blog.

Twitter didn't provide any clues as to whether it believes that China was behind its hack. However, the blog post by the company's director of information security, Bob Lord, made clear that the hackers knew what they were doing. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Free vs. fee. Is streaming music worth paying for? Canadians don't think so

A slew of streaming music services have come to Canada, and more are likely on the way, but while tech-savvy consumers seem to enjoy listening to music online, relatively few want to pay.

There are more than a dozen competitors to choose from in Canada, including free radio-style options, such as CBC Music and Songza, and fee-based a la carte listening platforms with millions of songs to access, such as Deezer, HMV's The Vault, Rara and Rdio.

A recently released report by the Media Technology Monitor suggests listening to music online is catching on with large numbers of Canadians. About 59 per cent of anglophones and 46 per cent of francophones said they listen to streaming audio, with YouTube being the most commonly cited source for seeking out tunes.

Another recent report, this one released by the Department of Canadian Heritage, also suggested many Canadians are interested in streaming — but most want it to be free. About one in three poll respondents said they were very or somewhat likely to subscribe to a free online music service, while just 17 per cent said they would likely pay a monthly fee for a subscription-based service. THE CANADIAN PRESS

New model of music

- Rdio CEO Drew Larner says the battle the entire music-streaming industry faces is in convincing the public that $5 or $10 a month is a bargain to gain access to a huge, growing catalogue of songs — and that it's a much better deal than the old way of paying to own individual albums or tracks.
- Last week Rdio announced it was offering up to six months of free streaming in Canada in a bid to hook music fans on the service and then convert them into paying subscribers. Users who binge on music will find the free offer expires before six months is through.

DID THE LOSS OF A FAMILY MEMBER BEFORE JUNE 14, 2010, RESULT IN A CORONER'S INVESTIGATION AND AUTOPSY?

IF SO, IT IS POSSIBLE THAT AN ORGAN WAS RETAINED AFTER AUTOPSY.

When deaths are investigated, pathologists sometimes retain an organ for further testing to help determine the cause of death.

In the past, family members may not have been notified that an organ had been retained. Now, families are routinely notified when an organ is retained and their wishes are sought regarding how the organ should be treated after testing is complete.

The Ontario Forensic Pathology Service is reaching out to anyone for whom the loss of a family member before June 14, 2010, resulted in a coroner's investigation and autopsy.

Immediate family members and personal representatives (i.e. those responsible for administering an estate) are invited to contact us to find out if an organ was retained in their case.

Some organs that were initially retained are no longer available due to the practices of the time. Others are still at the hospital or forensic pathology unit where the autopsy took place. In those cases, affected families and personal representatives may now request that the organ be sent to a funeral home for cremation or burial. Expenses will be covered by the Ontario Forensic Pathology Service and the Office of the Chief Coroner.

Remaining organs retained before June 14, 2010, will be respectfully disposed of beginning on June 14, 2013. This is in accordance with regulations made under the Coroners Act.

A toll-free telephone line has been set up. Contact us at 1-855-564-4122 or visit our website at Ontario.ca/OrganRetention.

Boeing engineers take strike vote

Dreamliner troubles. Potential job action could affect efforts to fix 787's battery issues

Just when Boeing really needs its engineers, they're voting on whether to strike.

It's bad timing for Boeing. The aircraft maker is working around the clock to solve battery problems that have grounded its 787s around the world, and unionized engineers are a big part of that effort.

The vote begins Tuesday and runs through Feb. 19. The union has recommended that its members reject Boeing's contract proposal, hoping the company offers something better, or they may strike.

The strike threat is growing just as Boeing is dealing with a host of other problems. It must mollify airlines frustrated about buying a $200-million plane they can't fly, and it needs to fix the battery problem. U.S. regulators have launched an open-ended review of the 787's design and construction. And Boeing needs to speed production of the 787 and other planes.

Boeing has said that fixing the 787, dubbed the Dreamliner, is taking its full effort.

The effort includes hundreds of members of the Society of Professional Engineering Employees in Aerospace, the union's executive director, Ray Goforth, said in an interview on Wednesday. The union represents some 23,000 workers at Boeing.

German customs had issued a statement Friday saying a cheque for 300 million Venezuelan Bolivars issued by the Bank of Venezuela was found on an unnamed 59-year-old man. Neither customs officials nor Iran's embassy could be reached for comment.

Iraq exchange gets first major stock float

Iraqi mobile phone service provider Asiacell sold a 25 per cent stake to investors Sunday on the Iraq Stock Exchange in what the head of the bourse said is the biggest initial public offering in the Middle East since 2008.

Taha al-Rubaye also said it's the first major stock float on the ISX, which was set up in 2004, a year after a U.S.-led invasion toppled Iraqi dictator Saddam Hussein.

The floatation, which raised close to $1.3 billion, was seen as a test of investor confidence in the country. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Madoff case. Investment profits belong to Ponzi scheme victims: Trustee

Jailed Wall Street fraudster Bernie Madoff may have finally picked a legitimate winner. A biopharmaceutical company partly owned by the Madoff family had an initial public offering Tuesday that sold $33 million US worth of stock.

The New York Post reports that Madoff's initial $2.2-million US investment in the company, Stemline Therapeutics, is now worth $5.5 million on paper. But the scammer might not be able to keep the money.

The trustee overseeing efforts to untangle Madoff's Ponzi scheme says the family's shares rightfully belong to his defrauded clients.

He has filed a lawsuit seeking to seize those shares on behalf of fraud victims.

Etch A Sketch inventor dies at age 86

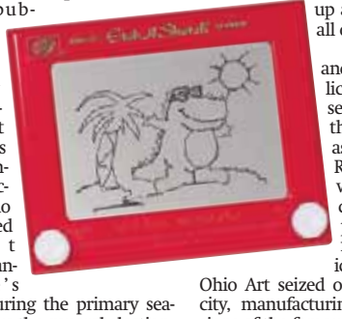
Andre Cassagnes, the inventor of the Etch A Sketch toy that generations of children drew on, shook up and started over, has died in France, the toy's maker said.

Cassagnes died Jan. 16 in a Paris suburb at age 86, said the Ohio Art Co., based in Bryan in northwest Ohio. The cause wasn't disclosed. "(Andre's) invention brought joy to so many over such a long period of time," said Larry Killgallon, president of Ohio Art.

Then an electrical technician, Cassagnes came upon the Etch A Sketch idea in the late 1950s when he peeled a translucent decal from a light-switch plate and found pencil-mark images transferred to the opposite face, the Toy Industry Association said.

Ohio Art saw his idea at the Nuremberg Toy Fair in 1959. The toy, with its grey screen, red frame and two white knobs that are twisted back and forth to create drawings, was launched in 1960 and became the top seller that holiday season. More than 100 million have sold worldwide since.

Though passed over in popularity for video games and gadgets, the toy has a steady market, the company has said. It got a big jump in sales after Etch A Sketch was featured in the first two Toy Story movies, and Ohio Art capitalized on a much-publicized gaffe by a Mitt Romney aide during last year's presidential election, who was asked about his candidate's views during the primary season versus the general election.



He likened the campaign to an Etch A Sketch: "You can kind of shake it up and we start all over again."

Democrats and Republicans alike seized on the remark as evidence Romney was willing to change his positions for political gain. And Ohio Art seized on the publicity, manufacturing blue versions of the famously red toy.

T.O.'S CHIEF PLANNER SEES CONGESTION AT A TIPPING POINT

URBAN COMPASS
Matt Elliott
toronto@metronews.ca

Toronto's chief planner thinks this city has had enough.

Enough with the delays, the congestion and the massive unpredictability of getting around this city. Enough with the packed subway trains, interminable waits in traffic and short turns that dump passengers into the freezing cold. Enough with the same old excuses for why things keep getting worse.

Jennifer Keesmaat moved into the top job at city hall's planning department last summer. Looking at the state of transportation in Toronto and across the wider GTA, she describes us as a city that has reached its "tipping point."

"We didn't address this issue in a substantive way 10, 15, 20 years ago," she tells me. "If you don't do what you ought to do in terms of good transportation planning, it eventually comes to a point where it affects everyone. Congestion becomes a part of your daily life."

To that end, Keesmaat's department, with the support of city council, has launched Feeling Congested? an extensive consultation campaign designed to collect public input on this topic.

Yes, the campaign will ask Torontonians for their thoughts on revenue tools to pay for transit. There will be talk of things like sales taxes, road tolls, increased parking fees and other mechanisms formerly walled off from political discourse. But the conversation won't stop there.

"We have to fully link transportation planning to land-use planning," she says. That means density. That means building neighbourhoods that are walkable — something Keesmaat feels particularly passionate about. And that means thinking carefully about maximizing the value we get out of transit expansion projects.

"It's not good to build large transportation infrastructure and then to underutilize it," she says. "We actually have an obligation in areas where we have great access to public transit to ensure that the density responds."

With some neighbourhoods ready to go to war over proposals for six-storey buildings, that won't be easy. Nor will it be easy to get people on board with any of the 14 suggested transit-funding revenue tools at the heart of Keesmaat's consultation process. But she's not seeing any other options.

"An important part of this process is a recognition that, look folks, we're getting what we pay for. And we haven't invested in a long time."

Plus, there's the future to consider — Toronto's legacy as a city that isn't paralyzed by congestion. Keesmaat thinks a lot about that.

"My hope is that there's someone sitting in my seat 10 or 15 years from now saying, 'Thank God they had the vision to really confront this issue head on and make some really important decisions about investing in how we move.'"

The first Feeling Congested? public consultation is set for Monday night at the York Civic Centre.

Willie, a dachshund, begs for a carrot in Toronto. Willie's owner, Ken Butland, says his two dogs quickly adapted to their new vegan diet and now can't get enough of it. - Vegan diets for dogs involve more than feeding them raw vegetables.
- Canines rely on dry vegan dog food for nutrients such as protein that they would have ingested through eating meat.
- Dogs, unlike cats, are natural omnivores who have the enzymes to break down the nutrients from a vegan diet and assimilate them for daily use, according to a Toronto veterinarian.

Veterinary technician Krista Wilcox tends to dogs at the Front Street Animal Hospital in Toronto and would only recommend a vegan diet when food allergies are present.

"An improper diet will cause a pet to, over time, show malnutrition," she said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

When wallets go missing, most of us resign ourselves to missing cash and cancelling credit cards.

But maybe it's time to have a little faith.

When Marina Romantchenko lost her purse (along with $200 cash) while acting as an extra in a friend's film, she retraced her steps to find an anonymous note explaining that her purse had been turned in to The Second City on Mercer Street. The note included contact information for the theatre, but not for the mysterious shepherd of lost purses.

"I was relieved to see the note," explains Marina, "but not surprised, as Torontonians demonstrate acts of kindness consistently."

A Second City employee contacted Marina the next morning to tell her that one of the theatre's improv students had returned the purse without leaving her name.

Marina returned the kindness with a loaded-up Tim Horton's gift card and a promise to pay the favour forward in the future. CRAIG AND MARC KIELBURGER

Justin Timberlake performs in New Orleans, La. GETTY IMAGES

One of the most anticipated musical moments of the year so far was connected to the Super Bowl, but had nothing to do with Beyoncé.

Instead, it was Justin Timberlake who had New Orleans buzzing as he gave his first performance in nearly five years — a sizzling, hour-long concert that featured the nattily dressed entertainer with a more than 10-piece band and guest appearances by Timbaland and Jay-Z. The performance was all part of DirecTV's Super Bowl-eve bash.

Beyoncé delivers the goods at Super Bowl

Now put your hands up. She put a groove on it — and this time it was live

Beyoncé sang like she had something to prove at the Super Bowl, balancing out the testosterone levels on the football field with a dance-heavy performance that featured her Destiny's Child band mates and an all-female band.

She emerged onstage singing some of Love on Top, transitioning to her hit Crazy In Love in an all-black ensemble, which matched the dark stage. She ripped off part of her shirt and skirt as she danced hard with background dancers doing the same.

She sang live — and sounded good. Days after admitting to singing to a pre-recorded track at President Barack Obama's inauguration, she proved herself to any doubters and added a few off-script remarks as if to show her microphone was on.

Her background singers helped out as Beyoncé danced around the stage throughout most of the 13-minute performance. She was especially top-notch during End of Time and Baby Boy.

She had a swarm of background dancers and band members spread throughout the stage, along with videotaped images of herself dancing. And the crowd got bigger when she was joined by her Destiny's Child band mates.

Kelly Rowland and Michelle Williams popped up from below the stage to sing Bootylicious. They were in similar outfits, singing and dancing closely as they harmonized. But Rowland and Williams were barely heard when the group sang Independent Woman, as their voices faded into the background.

They also joined in for some of Single Ladies (Put a Ring On It), where Beyoncé's voice grew stronger.

She asked the crowd to put their hands toward her as she belted the slow groove Halo on bended knee — and that's when the performance hit its high note.

Before the game, Alicia Keys performed a piano-tinged version of the national anthem. The Grammy-winning singer played the piano as she sang The Star Spangled Banner in a long red dress. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

'No surgery for me,' says Kidman

Despite numerous reports to the contrary, Nicole Kidman insists she's never indulged in plastic surgery.

"No surgery for me," she tells Italian newspaper La Repubblica. "I did try Botox, unfortunately, but I got out of it and now I can finally move my face again."

So how does the Australian actress keep her face looking the way it does? "I wear sunscreen, I don't smoke and I take care of myself, and I am proud to say that," she said. "Anybody can do anything to themselves — I don't judge — but personally, I believe in being physically fit."

Nick Cannon

Valentine's Day isn't the only time when Nick Cannon and Mariah Carey celebrate their love. Cannon admitted to Metro that the 30th of every month is their I Love You Day and they view that day as their monthly anniversary.

"No matter where we are in the world, even if we're not together on the 30th, we still send flowers and balloons and chocolates and all that good stuff," said the America's Got Talent host.

Considering Cannon and Carey are known romantics (they renew their wedding vows every year), we asked for his advice on how to make the day memorable. "The more thoughtful you can be, that shows effort. If you're going to do flowers, find out that person's favourite and figure out the arrangement yourself."

Holmes on Valentine's Day

Newly single Katie Holmes said her Valentine's Day tradition includes making red pancakes. Her mother made them for her ever since she was a child and she wants to continue this tradition with daughter, Suri, on Feb. 14. Sorry, Tom.

Ocean takes high road after brawl

Frank Ocean has decided not to press charges against Chris Brown after their brawl outside a Los Angeles recording studio last week, he revealed in a post to his Tumblr blog. "As a child, I thought if someone jumped me it would result in me murdering or mutilating a man. But as a man I am not a killer, I'm an artist and a modern person," Ocean writes. "I'll choose sanity. No criminal charges. No civil lawsuit. Forgiveness, albeit difficult, is wisdom. Peace, albeit trite, is what I want in my short life."

This week in creepy dads: 1) Adele's estranged dad is complaining to a newspaper that she won't have anything to do with him because he talked to a newspaper. 2) Hulk Hogan tweets a picture of daughter Brooke in a mini-dress with the caption "Brooke's legs." 3) The Hong Kong millionaire, who this fall offered $65 million to any man who could convince the millionaire's lesbian daughter to divorce her wife and marry a dude, reiterates his offer.

Your move, Selena. After Selena Gomez covers Justin Timberlake's Cry Me A River and Taylor Swift's I Knew You Were Trouble, Justin Bieber releases his own breakup song, Nothing Like This. Carole Mallory, author of a book about her affair with Norman Mailer, has written a new book about sleeping with famous men. In it, she says that Robert De Niro used to keep his socks on. "That totally ruined all my elaborate erotic fantasies involving Robert De Niro," said absolutely no one.

Porn actor James Deen talks about working with Lindsay Lohan on The Canyons. "In porn I am used to working with professionals who are courteous to others," he says. "Whatevs," says Lindsay. "I am used to working with family members who would steal my teeth."

Chris Brown claims he didn't throw any punches in a parking lot fight with Frank Ocean. Proof he may be right: 1) He posts on Instagram, comparing himself to a crucified Jesus. 2) Sources say it was only the respective entourages who were fighting. 3) Frank Ocean is not a woman.

The initial version of the Evil Dead remake got an NC-17 rating. The film was eventually edited to get an R, but still retains the "why yes, we did remake/stomp on one of your beloved cultural touchstones" warnings. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Family meals still matter

I read a study that says that family meals aren't necessarily beneficial.

Really?!

Families have been sitting down and breaking bread together for centuries. Why do we suddenly need to make a mockery of it? Aside from the obvious — time spent together — family meals give children a sense of routine and stability. It brings everyone together in a relaxed atmosphere where they laugh and talk. It teaches good table manners and healthy eating. My instinct also tells me that spending time eating meals with my children is not only good for them, but for me.

CANDACE DERICKX/YUMMYMUMMYCLUB.CA

Tips

Easy nosebleed clean-up

I like to give a red facecloth as part of a baby shower gift.

When a child — or even a squeamish parent — sees blood from a cut or nose bleed, they tend to freak out over all of the blood loss.

If the parents use a red facecloth instead of a white or light-coloured one, children won't see how much blood there is and will likely keep calmer during the entire ordeal.

It worked great for me when my kids were small — and even when they were not so small.

Dealing with dinnertime stress? Here's what not to say

Diet. Choice and praise may not be the best way to go at the dinner table

SARAH REMMER
RD of yummymummyclub.ca

As parents, we want our kids to eat a well-balanced diet and grow to enjoy a wide variety of healthy foods.

In our well-intentioned efforts, we often verbally encourage or discourage them to eat certain foods, only to increase picky eating tendencies or send the wrong messages about foods.

Here are some things that parents often say to their kids about food and why they may not be the best things to say.

1. "You must have at least three more bites of your vegetables before you can have dessert."

When kids feel that they have to eat one food in order to be rewarded with another, they automatically associate the first food with being less desirable. Instead, offer a variety of foods, including vegetables, at dinnertime.

Encourage your child to taste his veggies, and if he doesn't like it, he can politely spit it out in his napkin.

2. "You are such a good girl for eating everything on your plate!"

What your child hears after you make this statement is, "I am a good girl if I finish all of the food on my plate, so I better do that again tomorrow."

What you actually want as a parent is for your child to stop eating when she's comfortably full. Sometimes that means a clean plate, sometimes it doesn't.

Cleaning our plates no matter what often translates into eating beyond fullness, and over time, gaining unhealthy weight.

3. "We don't eat cookies in our house because they are bad for us."

Labelling foods as "good" or "bad" automatically makes your child feel like she is "good" for eating "good foods" and "bad" for eating "bad foods."

Truthfully, all foods can fit into a healthy diet, even if some of those foods aren't as healthy as others.

Instead, say: "We like to have lots of different foods in our house, including cookies sometimes. Maybe we can bake some together tomorrow and have one after dinner tomorrow night."

4. "I know you don't like the lasagna I'm making, so what would you like for dinner instead?"

Giving your child control over what he eats for dinner will discourage him from trying new and different foods, might actually encourage picky eating habits and will eventually drive you crazy. Everyone in the family should be offered the same meal. There should be three to four different foods to choose from. For example: lasagna, whole grain bread, cut up veggies and dip, salad, and milk. Your child should be offered all of these foods, and she can pick. She might choose four pieces of bread. And that's OK — you've done your job by offering a variety of different foods and the ball is in her court now.

Every child will go through a picky eating stage — it's normal. It can be frustrating and worrisome for parents, but it also offers an opportunity to help children develop a healthy relationship with food. Keep reintroducing foods, even if they are refused. Praise your kids for listening to their tummies and trying new foods (even if they politely spit it out).

Grilled cheese grows up with onions and tomatoes

Who would have thought old comfort food, grilled cheese, would make such a comeback — not only as a casual sandwich at home, but also as an elegant appetizer at parties.

Here's a twist on the traditional; I use it as a lunch item, on buffets and even cut into quarters as an appetizer.

1. Divide cheddar, Parmesan and goat cheese between two slices of bread. Top with sliced tomatoes and onions. Cover with remaining two slices of bread. Spray both sides of each sandwich with cooking oil.

2. Spray a non-stick skillet with cooking oil and place over medium heat. Cook the sandwiches for approximately 4 minutes per side, being careful not to burn them.

3. Cut each sandwich into quarters and serve 2 per person. ROSE REISMAN'S COMPLETE LIGHT KITCHEN (WHITECAP BOOKS)

Nutritional Analysis

Per serving

- 199 calories; 11 g protein; 11 g fat; 6.2 g saturated fat; 15 g carbohydrates; 25 mg cholesterol; 288 mg sodium; 2.3 fibre

Ingredients

Prep time: 10 minutes
Cooking time: 8 minutes

- 1/4 cup light aged cheddar cheese, thinly sliced
- 1/8 cup Parmesan cheese, freshly grated
- 1/4 cup crumbled goat cheese
- 4 slices whole grain bread
- 4 slices plum tomato
- 4 slices sweet onion

Type your way to the total package by polishing up your online presence

I'm with the brand. Beyond the resumé, there's a world of ways you can promote your best self on the web

ELIZABETH BEDDALL
life@metronews.ca

Welcome to the world of social media, where any aspect of your online biography can mean the difference between landing that dream job and getting promptly passed over.

In the process of prioritizing your personal brand, it's imperative that you make sure you accurately portray yourself online as you would in person, ensuring that recruiters receive a fair impression of your character and that they recognize the unique qualities you could bring to their organization.

To help evaluate your online presence, James Davidson, talent acquisition manager for PwC, provides us with five key considerations that will help you improve your digital brand and make you more noticeable than your competitors.

Relevance
People evaluate you based on relevance. This is how consistent the real-world-you is to the virtual-world-you. To increase your volume and relevance on the web, you can showcase your expertise, skills and experiences via online forums, Facebook, LinkedIn and Twitter.

Volume
Volume speaks to how much content is on the web about you — the more you have to say about yourself, the more information people will have to read about you.

Clarity
Clarity means the ease with which readers can differentiate the content that is about you versus information on others with the same name. It's imperative to secure your vanity name for LinkedIn, Facebook and Twitter. Spending some time to figuring out the right words to describe yourself is critical. This determines how easy it is for others to find you online.

Put your best face forward

"People are more likely to believe you if you have a professional photo."
James Davidson
Talent acquisition manager for PwC

Diversity
Diversity is having multimedia content supporting the real-world-you.

This means sharing photos, quotes, articles and videos — all of which help express your skills, passion and values in another way. For example, people are more likely to believe you and your work experience if you have a professional photo — especially on sites such as LinkedIn.

Validation
Lastly, validation is essential in getting other people to reference you or confirm who you really are.

This is extremely important to increasing the credibility of your personal brand. You need to get others to recommend you online, endorse you and provide you with testimonials. By attempting these online suggestions, you will be on your way to building and managing your professional online presence.

The web at work

PwC is hosting its second annual Personal Brand Week from Monday to Friday.

In-Credibility factor:

Friends since childhood, Ronjiny and Tanima always dreamed of doing something creative together. When Ronjiny completed her MBA in design, fashion and luxury goods in Italy, she finally convinced Tanima to put her remarkable nature photography to work.

Ronjiny Basu, above, and her business partner Tanima Majumdar use fabric made with 100 per cent natural fibres for their scarves. PROVIDED

The two friends launched a line of luxury, nature-themed scarves under the name of Chobhi, which in Bengali means "picture". They call their creations "wearable art" and will soon expand to include a unique line of jewelry.

Action Plan

- Have a strong business and marketing plan that is customer-centric. It's important to have a product that connects to customer's emotions and links to a lifestyle statement.
- Put innovation into your passion by reinventing your products. We're continuously trying to reinvent our strategy for the long term.
- Maximize the wonderful world of social media. We used Facebook, Twitter and Pinterest to help us understand our demographic and predict future purchasing patterns.

Tanima Majumdar is the photographic force behind Chobhi scarves. PROVIDED

We knew we were on our way...

"...When we held a scarf in our hands for the first time. I had seen it on Skype from India and it didn't seem real," says Tanima, "but when Ronjiny handed it to me, it was amazing and exactly what I had pictured. The colours and designs really stand out on fabric."

Ronjiny is in India right now working on producing their spring line and says, "It's been extremely rewarding to see something you are passionate about bloom and grow. Our wish is that our scarves connect with your heart."

Super Bowl MVP Joe Flacco holds up the Vince Lombardi Trophy after the Baltimore Ravens' 34-31 win over the San Francisco 49ers on Sunday night in New Orleans.

Ravens turn off the lights on 49ers

Super Bowl. San Fran nearly climbs all the way back following blackout in New Orleans, but Baltimore holds on to win second NFL title

Super Bowl XLVII

| Ravens | 49ers |
|---|---|
| 34 | 31 |

From blowout to blackout to shootout, Joe Flacco and the Baltimore Ravens had just enough power to survive one of the most electric Super Bowls ever.

The outage flipped a switch for the San Francisco 49ers, but the Ravens used a last-gasp defensive stand to hold on Sunday night, 34-31.

America's biggest sporting event came to a half-hour standstill in the third quarter when most of the Superdome lights and the scoreboards went dark. By then, the Ravens had a 22-point lead.

Everything changed after that, though, and the 49ers staged a sensational rally before Ray Lewis and Co. shut it down. But there were plenty of white-knuckle moments and the Ravens (14-6) had to make four stops inside their seven at the end.

For a Super Bowl with so many subplots, it almost had to end this way.

Flacco's arrival as a championship quarterback coincides with Lewis' retirement.

The sibling rivalry between the coaching Harbaughs went to John, older than Jim by 15 months.

"How could it be any other way? It's never pretty. It's never perfect. But it's us," John Harbaugh said. "It was us today."

At four hours, 14 minutes, it was the longest Super Bowl ever. Among the most thrilling, too.

The loss of power delayed the game 34 minutes and left players from both sides stretching and chatting with each other. It also cost Baltimore whatever momentum it built, and that was considerable after Jacoby Jones' 108-yard kickoff return and game MVP Flacco's three touchdown passes made it 28-6.

Back came San Francisco (13-5-1) in search of its sixth Lombardi Trophy in as many tries.

Michael Crabtree's 31-yard touchdown reception on which he broke two tackles made it 28-13. A couple minutes later, Frank Gore's six-yard run followed a 32-yard punt return by Ted Ginn Jr., and the 49ers were within eight.

Ray Rice's fumble at his 24 led to David Akers' 34-yard field goal, but Baltimore woke up for a drive leading to rookie Justin Tucker's 19-yard field goal.

San Francisco wasn't done challenging, though, and Colin Kaepernick's 15-yard TD run, the longest for a quarterback in a Super Bowl, made it 31-29. A two-point conversion pass failed when the Ravens blitzed.

Tucker added a 38-yarder with 4:19 remaining, setting up the frantic finish.

Kaepernick couldn't get the 49ers into the end zone on the final three plays — there was contact on Crabtree on the final pass that appeared incidental, and Jim Harbaugh insisted it was pass interference.

Ravens punter Sam Koch took a safety for the final score with four seconds left.

NFL. Lewis puts tidy Super Bowl bow on 17-year career

Ray Lewis began his final night on the football field with a motivational speech to his teammates.

He ended it looking upward into a shower of silver streamers and purple confetti after the Ravens beat the San Francisco 49ers 34-31 Sunday night to win the Super Bowl.

"It's simple: When God is for you, who can be against you?" Baltimore's standout middle linebacker said, clutching the Lombardi Trophy. "It's no greater way, as a champ, to go out on your last ride with the men that I went out with, with my teammates."

Standing tall in the middle of a defence that survived a frenzied comeback by Colin Kaepernick and the 49ers, Lewis put a lovely bow on his 17th NFL season by earning his second Super Bowl ring — 12 years after the first.

Raonic win leads Canada past No. 1 Spain

Milos Raonic propelled Canada into the second round of the Davis Cup World Group Sunday.

Raonic beat Spain's Guillermo Garcia-Lopez in straight sets — 6-3, 6-4, 6-2 — at UBC's Doug Mitchell Thunderbird Sports Centre in Vancouver. Raonic was rarely tested by Garcia-Lopez, ranked 82nd in the world, who made his first Davis Cup appearance. Garcia-Lopez was inserted into the do-or-die match by Spanish captain Alex Corretja.

The win marked the first time Canada has advanced to the second round of the World Group level, which is open to the top 16 countries. Canada is ranked 12th on the Davis Cup table while Spain entered the weekend No. 1.

Leafs' coach looking to depth

The Toronto Maple Leafs' Dion Phaneuf and Phil Kessel continue to lead Toronto in ice time, but there is debate as to whether or not the two highest-paid players are actually the club's best at this early juncture of the season.

Both players are featured prominently in coach Randy Carlyle's game plan, and they dominate five-on-five and special teams' ice time. Carlyle, though, calls his club a work in progress. With a record of 4-4 after eight games, the Leafs need to tighten up their turnovers, use their speed and forecheck to greater advantage and toughen up in front of the opposition net. The top players in those respects have been on the third line — Nazem Kadri, Leo Komarov and Matt Frattin. And on defence, Mike Kostka has logged more minutes than Phaneuf in some games, while Mark Fraser has led the way physically. Interestingly, four of those five are products of Dallas Eakins' coaching with the Toronto Marlies.

Ki-Bosh'd: Heat halt Raptors' bid for second-straight upset

NBA. After unexpected blowout win over Clippers on Friday night, Toronto runs out of gas in fourth quarter against defending champs

On Sunday

| Heat | Raptors |
|---|---|
| 100 | 85 |

Chris Bosh lifted the Miami Heat to victory over his old team on Sunday — and then he thanked Toronto fans for helping him do so.

Bosh, who was received by a chorus of boos during team introductions, scored 13 of his 28 points in the fourth quarter as the Heat defeated the Raptors 100-85 on Sunday for their 10th consecutive victory over Toronto.

"I was hearing a lot from the fans," said Bosh, who departed for Miami in a sign-and-trade deal in the 2010 off-season. "I thank them for continuing to stay on me and call me names and stuff because that helped my focus a lot. I was like, 'I need to get in this to shut them up.'"

LeBron James poured in a game-high 30 points, while Dwyane Wade added 23 points for the Heat (30-14).

The loss spoiled strong efforts by new Raptors forward Rudy Gay, who scored 29 points, and DeMar DeRozan, who added 27.

"I wouldn't say I'm 100 per cent comfortable," said Gay, two days after joining his new team. "I'm still feeling my way out there. I still think this is a game we could've won. We still have a couple things to iron out in practice."

Kyle Lowry added 10 points for Toronto (17-31), while Aaron Grey had a game-high 12 rebounds to go with six points.

Raptors coach Dwane Casey knew the Heat would be hungry, coming off a 102-89 loss Friday in Indiana.

"They're going to be like a bunch of wet hens," Casey said before the game. "They're going to be really, really ready to play."

Toronto, meanwhile, was coming off a thrilling 98-73 victory over the Los Angeles Clippers in Gay's Raptors debut.

And while the Heat needed overtime to beat Toronto 123-116 when the teams met on Jan. 23 in Miami, that wasn't the case Sunday.

Toronto led by eight in the second quarter, but were trailing 71-67 by the end of the third, and six consecutive points by Bosh gave the Heat a six-point lead with 5:41 left.

"They're the defending champs," Gay said. "I say for three and a half quarters we played them as well as anybody in the league. The fact that we haven't been together for a long time, they exposed that in the fourth and a little bit in the third."

A DeRozan dunk made it a three-point game with under five minutes to play. But a wide open Bosh drained a three-pointer from the corner, James followed it up with a dunk and then a three of his own to put the Heat up by 12 and the game out of reach with 1:28 left to the disappointment of an Air Canada Centre capacity crowd of 19,800.

Bosh's three prompted one fan to stand up and holler: "Why couldn't you play like that when you were in Toronto?"

"I'm a little surprised," Bosh said of the booing. "But, you know, they paid their money they can do what they want. I hope they just remember the good times."

DeRozan had high praise for his former teammate.

"I sat right next to (Bosh), his locker was right next to mine, just to play with an all-star like that my rookie year, the type of player he was, that helped me," DeRozan said. "Obviously he was the No. 1 option when he was here, but he's stepped into his new role (as part of a trio of stars)."

Toronto shot 37 per cent on the night to the Heat's 53 per cent. The Raptors' bench was of little help to the starters, shooting just 4-for-18 for 11 points.

James attended the Maple Leafs' 1-0 loss to Boston Saturday night — he tweeted it was the first time he'd seen an NHL game live. Pictures of James holding the Grey Cup at a Toronto sports bar, where he joined some Argonauts players, appeared on Twitter later in the night. THE CANADIAN PRESS

- Celtics 106, Clippers 104. Paul Pierce scored 22 as the Boston Celtics held off a Los Angeles Clippers comeback on Sunday to improve to 4-0 since losing Rajon Rondo for the season. The Clippers made it 103-101 with 56 seconds left, but Avery Bradley drew an offensive foul on Los Angeles' Jamal Crawford with 26 seconds to go, and Pierce made a three-pointer with 2.5 second left to clinch the win. ## Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
You may be a go-getting Aries but there are only so many things you can do in a day, so don't push yourself too hard. Mars, your ruler, is passing through one of the more relaxed areas of your chart. Get the message?

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Your feelings run deep but you can't seem to find an adequate outlet for them. How frustrating! If all else fails try something physical, something that forces you to work up a sweat. Team sports, especially, will be fun.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
You must be honest today. You must bring any bad feelings you may have towards people you work or do business with to the fore. The most important thing is that you can be truthful with one another.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Expect the best today and it will most likely happen. Today's cosmic climate indicates that good thoughts will lead to good things occurring– but also that bad thoughts could lead to bad things. It's your call.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Try not to allow materialistic issues to govern your life. Make a special effort to raise your sights above worldly things and you may discover something of unequalled value. There is more to life than making money.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You may be in an adventurous mood at the moment but the planets warn this is not the best time to take risks. Above all, don't let others persuade you to do things you do not feel comfortable with.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Cosmic activity in one of the more sensitive areas of your chart suggests that someone does not approve of your behavior. Do you care? You should, because this person has the power to make life difficult for you. Tread carefully.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
No matter what your responsibilities may be you owe it to yourself to leave them behind and take life easy for a while. The more you rest now the more you will make a good job of your duties later on.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
A domestic matter of some kind has to be dealt with – not tomorrow or the day after but right now. Take everyone's feelings into consideration but then make a decision – and make sure everyone follows it.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
The planets warn that no matter how much you desire a particular object once you have got it you will realize it was not what you wanted at all. You are searching for something deeper, so look inside yourself.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You may be sociable by nature but watch out who you make friends with this coming week. Some people are genuine, of course, but others want to get close to you for financial reasons. You're not that gullible, are you?

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Mars links with your ruler Neptune in your birth sign today, which will help you to take the initiative and get everyone around you working towards the same goals. You should be this more often!
